

ABSTRACT

A book-like article having a plurality of story panels that are removably attached to each other and that, upon removal, can be assembled to form a building-like structure. Each of the story panels is attached to another one of the plurality of story panels. At least one of the story panels includes normally visible textual information on a first surface and normally hidden graphical information on a second surface. Some of the story panels are removably attached to a book-like article and configured to be assembled to form a building-like structure consistent with the textual information.